Workers highlight safety fears as busy sites stay open

Workers have been highlighting safety fears at all sites across the country today as many other industries have shut down or scaled back work in light of the government’s latest public health advice, wrote Harriet Jones, Zak Garner-Purkis and Willis Rowland.

The choice no family should have to make

Zak Garner-Purkis

A sense of dread has infected everything. An itch of the nose, a tic to the chest, that passing change who can’t breathe.

Irresistible things spook darkly. What if the government tells us to stay in every time we watch the television or unlock our phones we are reminded “Stay at home, protect the kids and save lives”. The false errs are close, afraid of the outside world, 1 metre away from people inside your household.
